

	Azure	Emerald	H_____	Indigo	Scarlet	D_____	Kazoo	Lyre	T_____	Xylophone	D_____	Dingo	Macaw	M_____	Mongoose
Caradog
Cazique
Gromer
Precipitous
Quentin
D_____
Dingo
Macaw
M_____
Mongoose
D_____
Kazoo
Lyre
T_____
Xylophone

Magician	Cloak color	Instrument	Creature

Five magicians of great renown gathered for the grand finale of the ancient Rhyfedd. Each was decked in a distinctive cloak of a royal hue. Their challenge—to conjure a unique creature and a musical instrument with which their creation will demonstrate their talent.

Sadly one of the contestants has meddled with this final puzzle so that some of the entries are missing, but you contestant should have the magic words to fill in the empty spots, and thus solve this last puzzle and determine who the notorious scoundrel was?

1. Gromer the Green, of course insisted on his trademarked emerald cloak, though Caradog scoffed at the idea that he should conjure a D_____ or a dingo because of the word ‘dog’ in his name and ultimately chose a different creature.
2. The talented dingo played the d_____.
3. Quentin’s cloak color, creature and instrument all ended with the same letter.
4. The three creatures beginning with the letter M were the one conjured by Cazique, the one conjured by the magician with the scarlet cloak, and the one whose talented creature played the T_____.
5. Precipitous did not conjure the m_____. (He’d had previous bad experiences with monkeys and had vowed never again.)
6. The two creatures beginning with the letter D were conjured by the magician with the indigo cloak and the one whose creature played a lyre.
7. The kazoo was expertly played by the creature conjured by the magician with the azure cloak.
8. The magician who conjured the macaw and the one wearing the cloak of h_____ shared the same initial letter.
9. The scoundrel who tampered with the ancient Rhyfedd was wearing a suitably diabolical scarlet cloak!

The Scoundrel was _____